Description

Purpose of Position

The Canadian Museum for Human Rights (CMHR) is centered around the idea that respect and understanding of human rights can serve as a positive force for change in the world. The Human Rights Advisor will collaborate with others in the organization to support our collective efforts to build a workplace culture that is inclusive, equitable, innovative, and focused on inspiring action.

The Human Resources Advisor provides knowledgeable and influential advice, guidance, recommendations, and support to CMHR leaders/managers and employees on challenges and opportunities related to employee relations, labour relations, occupational health and safety, recruitment, and related HR matters to support the attraction, retention, cultural and engagement priorities and values of CMHR.

The incumbent will be a strong, insightful, empathetic, and thoughtful communicator, critical thinker and influencer, and will bring a collaborative approach to their work which often involves sensitive and confidential people matters, situations and solutions.

Key Responsibilities

- Contributes to a culture that promotes respect, equity, inclusion and innovation, and models anti-racist and accountable behaviours.
- Provides consultative advice and works collaboratively with leaders/managers and employees facilitating solutions through delivering counsel, guidance, support and influence on employee relations matters including the interpretation and application of human resource policies and procedures/processes, work performance challenges, duty to accommodate situations, sensitive and confidential matters, recognition and engagement opportunities, attendance and disciplinary matters, interpersonal conflict management situations, etc.
- Supports the collective bargaining process offering insight, conducting related research, documenting negotiation discussions, etc.
- Provides guidance, communication and education on the interpretation and administration of the collective agreement and coordinates the handling of grievance situations aimed at resolution, providing insights and recommendations.
- Researches and provides guidance on compliance with related occupational health and safety regulations, policies and principles encompassing physical, environmental and psychological health and safety; coordinates and collaborates on the establishment and ongoing work of CMHR's Health and Safety Committee or like body.
- Partners with management on staff recruitment.
- Nurtures respectful working relationships and trust with all stakeholders.

- Provides related documentation and reporting/metrics on all aspects in areas of responsibility.
- Participates in the research, development, continuous improvement and recommendation of related policies, programs and services, and coordinates implementation and communication as directed.
- Participates in the annual creation of the Human Resources Department Plan and assists the Director, Human Resources in the implementation of special HR projects and initiatives related to the plan.
- Collaborates with the Director, Human Resources to develop strategies to ensure the desired CMHR culture is reflected in the work activities executed by the job and the related outcomes delivered.
- Stays current on legislation/regulations, trends, best practices, developments, and new initiatives in areas of responsibility.

Required qualifications

- Education at the post-secondary level including formal human resources training (e.g., completion of a HR certificate, diploma, or degree including in Social Sciences) and at least 5 years in a related HR role including experience in a unionized environment, providing recruitment, employee and labour relations services and support, occupational health and safety coordination, or an equivalent combination of applicable work and life experience and education.
- Commitment to human rights principles, including respect, equity, inclusion and dignity for all.
- Demonstrated understanding of and experience with:
 - providing guidance and support on employee relations matters including dealing with work performance challenges, workplace and interpersonal conflict, duty to accommodate principles, etc.
 - providing insight and guidance on labour relations matters including supporting the collective bargaining process, administering the collective agreement, nurturing positive relationships, building management and employee knowledge and skills on labour/employee relations principles and related matters through training /facilitation, dealing with grievances and related matters, etc.;
 - federal employment law, collective bargaining and labour relations principles and occupational health and safety requirements.
 - all aspects of the recruiting cycle and demonstrated ability to execute recruitment plans that result in the attraction, retention and engagement of talent.
- Strong office computer skills, specifically in Microsoft Office (Word, Excel and Outlook), skills using meeting technology and familiarity with recruitment tracking software.
- Ability to maintain strict confidentiality when handling confidential and sensitive information and documentation.
- Strong facilitation, interpersonal, influencing, oral and written communication skills, and the ability to establish and maintain effective working relationships at various levels.
- Demonstrated ability to manage competing or divergent perspectives.
- Ability to work both independently and collaboratively in a team-oriented environment.
- Superior attention to detail, critical thinking, analytical, research and problem-solving skills.
- Ability to develop rapport with diverse individuals and provide superior customer service; demonstrates empathy and insight.
- Strong time management skills, with the ability to work under pressure, multi-task and prioritize in order to meet deadlines.
- Ability to take initiative, assert influence over events to achieve results; self-starting rather than accepting passively.

Desired qualifications

- The CPHR designation (or currently pursuing the CPHR) would be an asset.
